The Presbyterian Re-union at Washington, Pa., Yesterday. Yesterday was the day fixed for the Presbyterian re-union at McFarland's drove, Washington, Pa. We do not know why the 31st, or last day, of Augus was fixed for the time of holding the social gathering, but we do know that nore auspicious and beautiful day could not have been selected. The weather was delightful, and in the glorious shade afforded in the grove those present en-joyed a "lodge in a vast wilderness." The grove is admirably located, being within quarter of a mile of the town, and not a hundred yards from the Hempfield and Chartier's Valley railroads. The only drawback is the lack of water. Yesterday there was a bountiful supply of water on the ground, it having been hauled in bar rels, which were conveniently located a various points in the grove. Ample seating capacity for over one thousa had been arranged in a well selected portion of the grounds, in front of the speaker's stand. The stand was

Rev. S. L. Wilson, of Allegheny Theoogical Seminary, led in prayer, was the first speaker. He was selected to make the opening address as he is the oldest member of the Presbytery of Washington and the synod of Pittsburgh, with both of which the Presbyterian Churches of Wheeling are connected. Dr. Stockton has been pastor of the church at Cross Creek for over forty-nine years, and has preached constantly in that one field of abor. There is not one minister in ten thousand who can look back upon such a glorious record. Of course he is dearly beloved by his congregation, having mar ried many of the older members of his hurch, baptised and married their children and in some instances their grandchildren. The Doctor confined his re marks mostly to the early history of the church, having been personally acquainted with many of the early pioneers of

As the meeting draws to a close the interest of many seems to deepen rather than to grow less, and many express the desire to have it continued until after the Sabhath. The number in attendance to-day was small, though to-night there is a larger, audience than usual, drawn together more to witness the closing exercises than to hear the preaching perhaps. There are now one thousand in the congregation.

There are now one thousand in the congregation.

Dr. Ball preached from the words, "Be ye faithful unto death," &c. Before commencing the sermon he returned his thanks to all for their kindness, and congratulated all concerned on the pleasant times enjoyed during the entire meeting. Good order has prevailed throughout. Perfect harmony has existed at all times at the meetings of the different committees. Nat one word of strife or discord has marred any of the meetings of the association. The meeting has surely been a success. His sermon was an earnest appeal for the Christian to take high grounds. Be willing if needs be to suffer nest appeal for the Christian to take high grounds. Be willing if needs be to suffer martyrdom for the faith. Many illustrations were given showing that thousands had thus suffered, and that thousands more were willing so to do if necessary. But I must close my report, and perhaps may send an account of the closing scenes of the meeting to-morrow.

this region within our remembrance. There were probably thirty or forty ministers in the assembly. The attendance of laymen was large and the number of ladies present quite noticeable. The whole assemblage seemed to be a very happy, social throng. Altogether, the occasion was one of the pleasantest character. Not a circumstance occurred to mar the peake and harmony of the day, and all present were in favor of a second Re-union next year, if not sooner.

The camp ground to-day, after the crowd had_left, looked dreary indeed, after the throng of life that had mived upon it for the past week. Those who had spent the week there were loth to leave, and the "Good-byes" were lingering and the "Good-byes" with case and so it down and the large assembly attack and a general temperance meeting was held at the large assembly afterwards. Mr. G. G. Watters, of the Bellaire circuit preached at 2 o'clock P. M., and Mr. Hawthorn Brithe evening. After the night service a general happy time was had; that being the last opportunity that the assembly would enjoy.

The Bellaire folks who returned this morning were Rev. G. G. Watters, Mr. James Fitton and family, Squire Powell's family, Gen. Hoge's family, Mrs. Dr. Grafton and Daughter, Mrs. E. Williams and daughter, D. Westlake and family, Miss Ella Ogle and Miss Maggie James.

On Monday morning the gates were thrown open to all, and no admission charged. Much has been said upon both sides in regard to the habit of charging for admittance to camp meetings. It certainly does seem just that those who desire pleasure or profit from the exercises at the meeting should bear a portion of the expense. On the other hand it is urged that to charge a man for the privilege of attending divine service is an indirect tax on religion. Probably nothing we could say would go anyways toward induscing either class of thinkers on the subject to change their minds. But we hadn't the slightest objection to paying for our ticket, or to being asked to show it whenever we entered the enclosure.

for our ticket, or to being asked to show it whenever we entered the enclosure. And surely, if a reporter can pay without "aquealing," other classes of people, who are accustomed to paying for admission to other places, have no room to growl. We find the remarks of your Mounds ville correspondent in this morning's issue exemplified here. Papers with the proceedings and contraines on the roceedings and occurrences on the rounds in are in greater demand than vercoats were last Saturday evening, and that is the most emphatic way we now of putting it. SNAP. Piles are being driven for a bridge over the mouth of MacMahon's Creek on the line of the B. & S. W. Kailroad. The structure will be what is known as a "combination" bridge. The line of the rgad is all surveyed but the twelve miles between Beallaville and Woodsfield, which will be done, this week. Work at grading goes steadily on.

We vesterday took a look at Zelch's new hall on South Union street, and found it quite a creditable assembly room.
